From the Director - Autosomal DNA: The New Revolution - Part 2

In continuation from the article began in the January 2010 ISOGG Newsletter - - Family Tree DNA announced in February they would be offering an autosomal DNA test called "Family Finder". The new test launched in beta and is ordered by invitation only. Family Tree DNA President, Bennett Greenspan, debuted the test at the "Who Do You Think You Are? LIVE!" conference in London, England on February 26-28, 2010. He commented that, "Since I first realized the importance of the Y-chromosome for genealogical purposes in 1999, I have not been as excited about any genetic tool until now".

The first results from the beta launch came in around mid-March and there are already success stories pouring in. (See Brent Bradberry's success story below.) Two important things to know about this new test is that while the confidence level is in the fifth cousin range, the test may detect small matching segments from ancestors farther back than the fifth cousin range. Many people who have had successes discover that their common ancestor lived in the 1600's. So it is very important to enter your ancestral surnames at least back to that time frame if possible.

To enter your surnames, login to your "My FTDNA" page and click the "Chromosome Browser" tab and then click the "Edit My Family Finder Profile" tab on the right side. It will give you the option to either manually enter individual surnames or upload a GEDCOM. When one of your matches has a surname in common with you, the system will highlight that surname.

Remember, because autosomal DNA is received from both of your parents, this means you will have matches with males and females, even including females with your surname. This has happened to me; I have a match to a female sixth cousin with my maiden name and I cannot tell you how amazing a feeling it is to be a female and FINALLY be able to see shared DNA in ME from my PATERNAL line! And after all these years of having to recruit male relatives for Y-chromosome testing...autosomal DNA has broken the gender barrier. We will see many more genetic genealogy success stories to come from it.

Who Do You Think You Are?

If you are not watching "Who Do You Think You Are?" on NBC on Friday nights, you are missing the best new show on primetime TV in America! Fortunately, you can watch any episodes you have missed via the online website, but now that you know what you are missing, be sure to tune in for the remaining three shows.

This show is turning out to be a real boon for genealogy by sparking people's interest in their family history. One ISOGG member's experience: "I have three grown children and only the youngest has shown even a mild interest in genealogy. However, WDYTYA has become a favorite TV program of her children - girls aged 9 and 6. The girls will not be home this Friday and insist it be taped; a must not miss program. The older one has been taken with the ties to history of the first two programs - she "knew" the people and was amazed at the history that unfolded. The younger one was spellbound by Emmitt (for her, from both football and Dancing with the Stars) and his journey back to his roots in Africa."

And speaking of Dallas Cowboys Hall of Famer, Emmitt Smith; he is the first in the series (the U.S. version at least) to try genetic ancestry testing to explore his roots.

Emmitt Smith was tested at three different DNA companies: DNA-Ancestry, 23andMe.com and African Ancestry. Megan Smolenyak2, author of the "Who Do You Think You Are? The Essential Guide to Tracing Your Family History", presented the results to Emmitt on the show. The autosomal DNA percentages were done by 23andMe and to Megan's surprise, Emmitt had a higher percentage of African DNA than she has seen before in an African-American.

Megan also shared that, "Since appearing in that episode, I've been bombarded with emails with questions about DNA testing, so I hope we're getting some fresh recruits!"

George D. Gardiner, who was sentenced to a lifelong imprisonment for shooting Eugene GUINDON, is bookkeeper in the Commissary's office of the prison. Gardiner is visited by his wife and daughter, and still says that his attacks of neuralgia were the influences under which he committed the deed. He appears decidedly less care worn than when on trial. The routine work of bookkeeping is decidedly pleasant, and in a measure serves to separate him from the habitual class of criminals.

Because this mis-spelling is such an endemic problem, here is an easy rule to help you. The first letters of each word in this very true sentence combine to form the correct spelling of genealogy. Remember the sentence and you'll be able to spell the word correctly every time.

DEATH RECORDS

Information on your ancestor's death is not limited to a death certificate. In fact, depending on the time period, civil registration may not be an option.

You can find a comprehensive list of what death records are available online through Joe Beine's website Online Searchable Death Indexes & Records. Here you can search for online records by state and county. Some larger cities like Chicago and Los Angeles have their own page of links.

Not sure when vital registrations began for the state you are researching? Try VitalRec.com where you can choose the state you are interested in and view when death records began for that state. You can also look on an individual county level as well as for information on other countries.

Some other ideas for finding death information include, but are not limited to:

Newspapers: Death information can be found in many different sections of the newspaper. Obituaries, death notices, funeral notices, legal notices, articles, etc. Look for digitized newspaper through genealogy subscription sites like Ancestry, WorldVitalRecords, GenealogyBank and others. Some states have digitized newspaper projects that also may be helpful. Some examples include Utah, California and Colorado. Also check out Google News Archive.
